

Ride the hot winds of summer once again and chase an image just out of sight. Feel the tension bind your shoulders in pain with every gearshift on that ragged edge near destruction. While arms and legs go numb, look through sweat-drenched goggles for the checkered flag somewhere beyond the next curve, and the next, and the next.

Try not to think of the one always riding beside you, that final shadow never considered nor acknowledged except in remote and abstract terms. Yet make one miscalculation, have one part break loose on that hard roadway you ride and, when dust and wreckage settle, you may be beyond everything and into that final oblivion which is Death.

Don't take time to look at cool shadows, calling you from beneath waving trees; don't look for individual faces in the psychedelic blur beside the course; don't even look at the tach because, in the seat of your pants, you feel the car's power more accurately than mere gauges might tell.

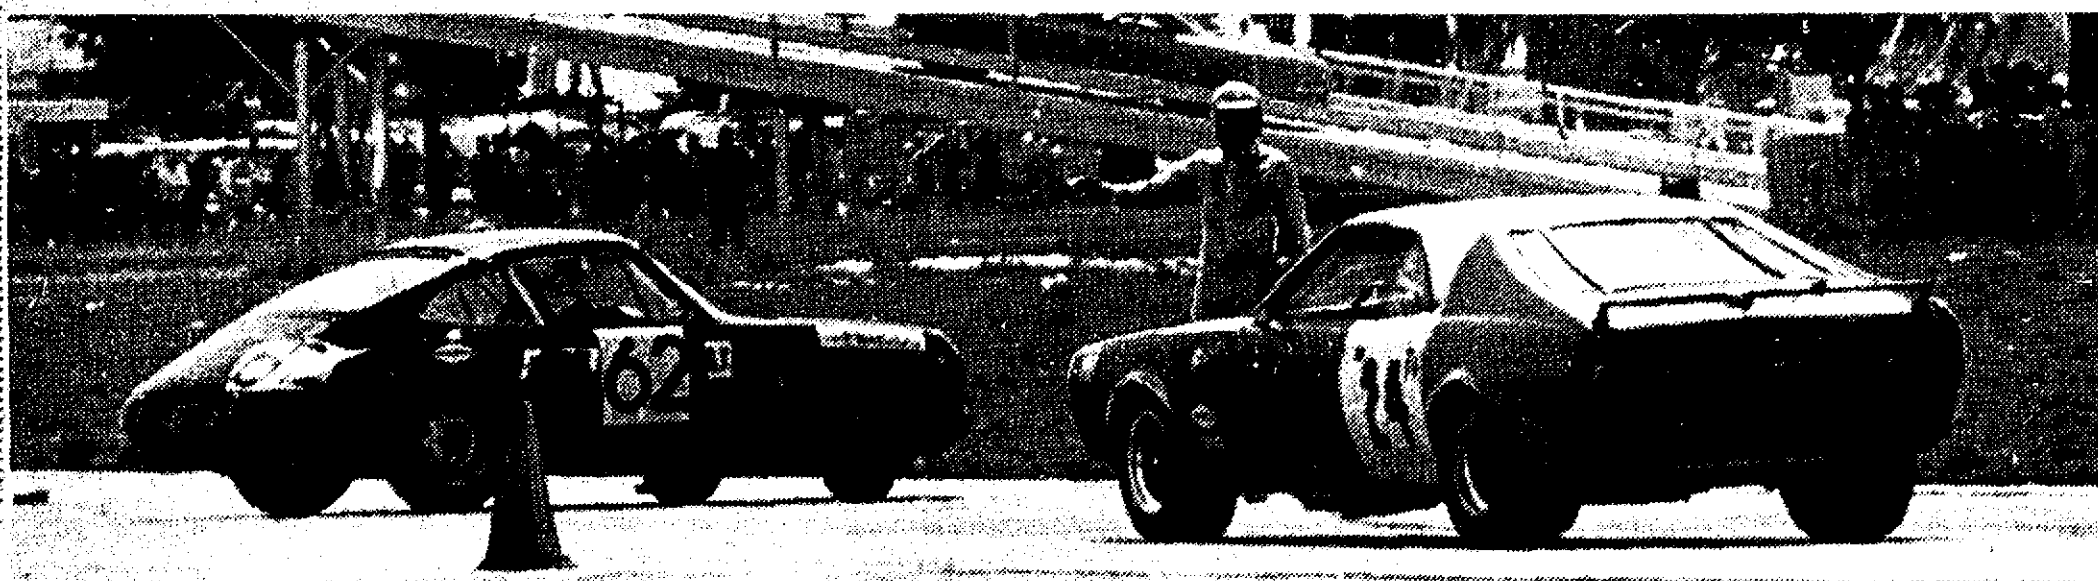

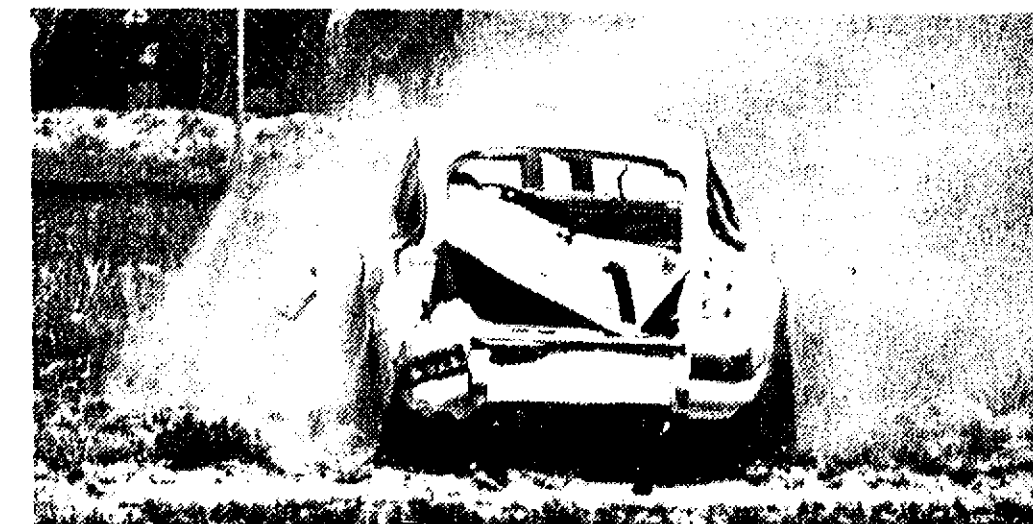

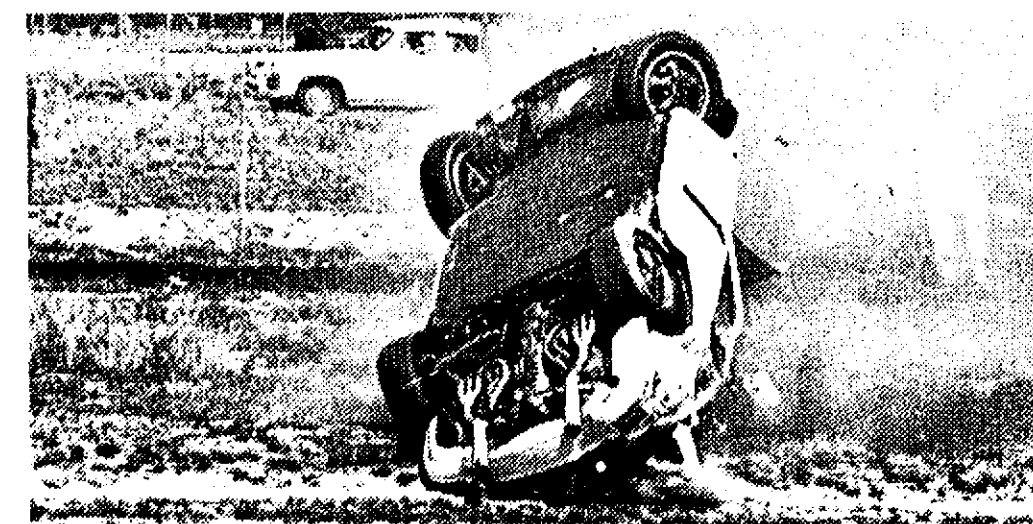

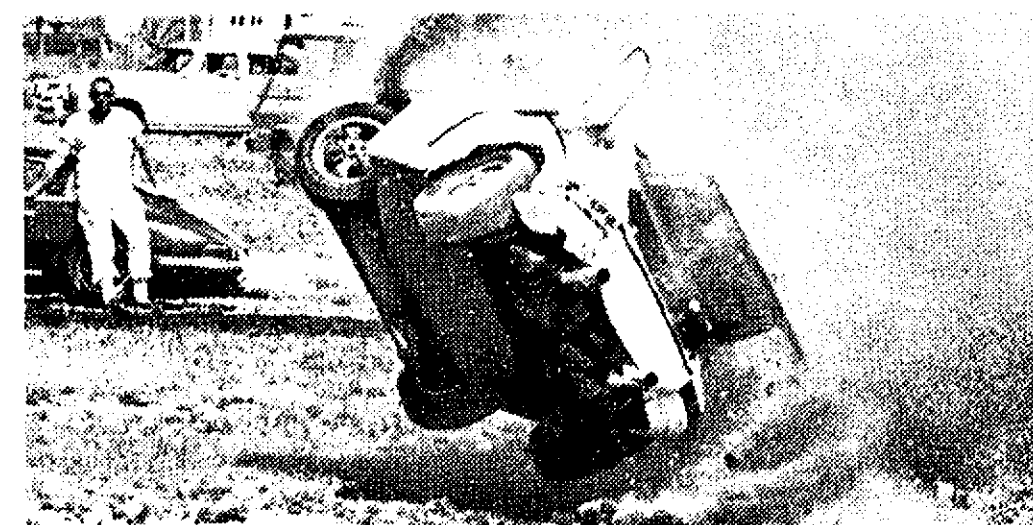

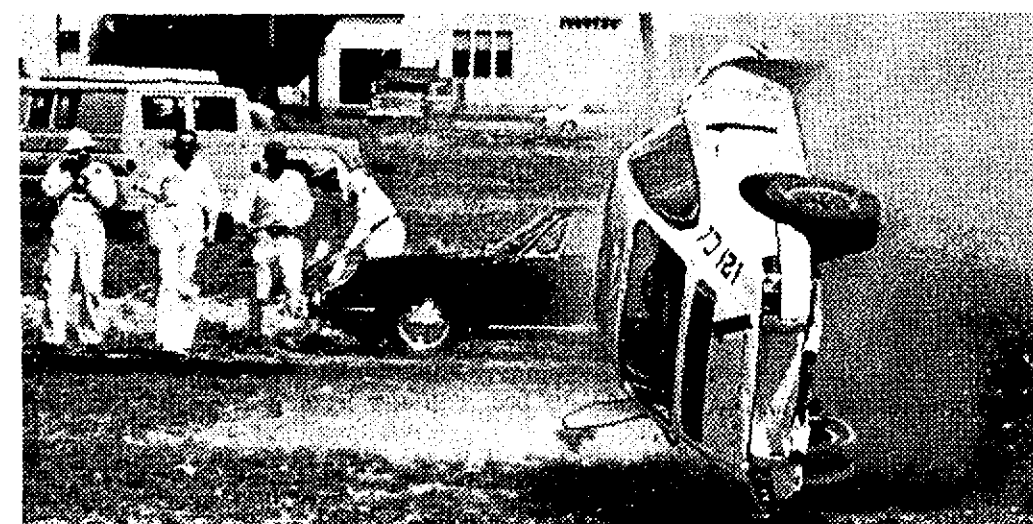

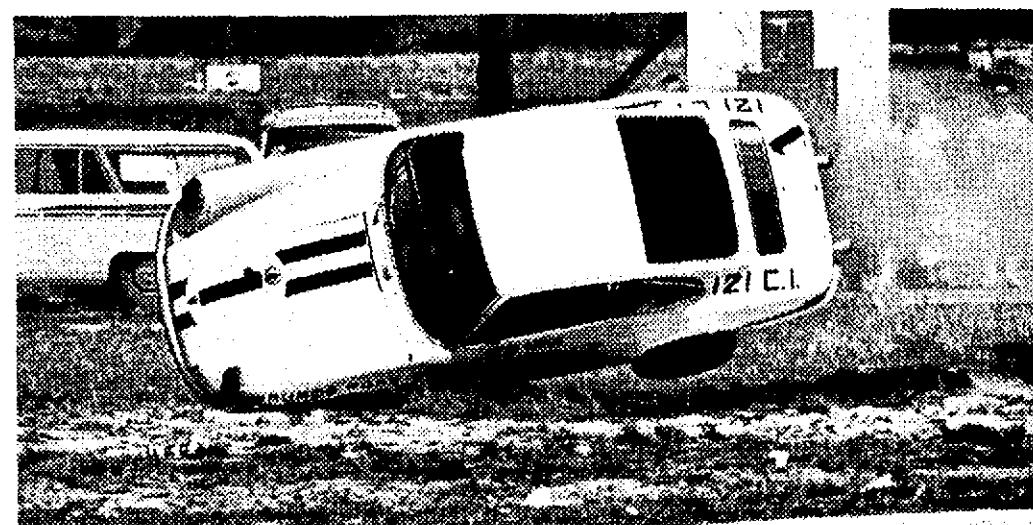

Listen closely, way down inside, and you'll hear the laughter of yesterday's greats showing the way: Nuvolari, Ascari, Hawthorne and Collins. Their spirits come to join your scream along the straights, your claim on the curves while, behind, others forever drop away.

Men stand ready to keep you going or, when your time ends, a co-driver waits with lightning in his eyes to enter the hushed thunder of power now beneath your feet and driving forward, on and on and on.

You've been there before, been to Daytona Beach or Riverside, to Sebring (where these pictures were taken) or Laguna Seca, to Watkins Glen or Las Vegas. You've raced them all to the music of howling engines and the perfume of belching exhausts. It keeps you going, won't let you slow down until that black and white flag blurs past speed-soaked face.

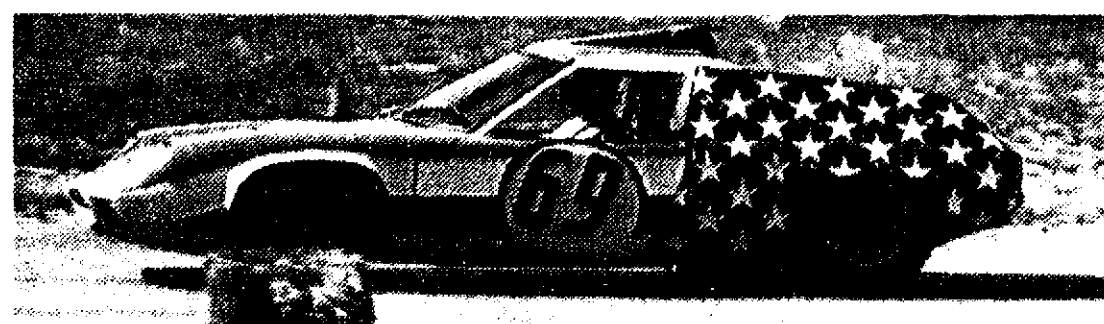

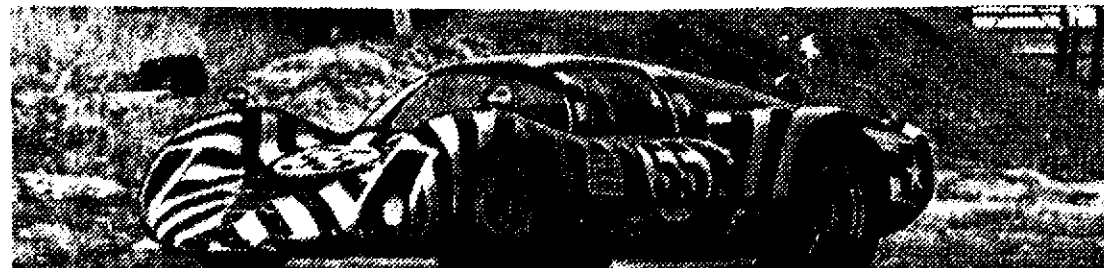

If you're the lucky one, the sweet taste of victory comes from the big shiny cup and the distant cheers of the crowd. But all the while you'll look back to that wondrous place just left and, in upcoming summer heat, you'll wait with impatience for the next opportunity to ride once more the winds.

1. Sometimes spectators are too close or damage too much to keep going.

2. There's a siren song out there, echoed but briefly in victory.

3. They come in many sizes and wear many colors.

4. Suddenly the car is over the edge and you wait for silence to return.

FOUR OUT OF FIVE OF THE NATION'S COLLEGE FRESHMEN will enter "community" colleges next year. Estimated half of every 1,000 students entering in September will be in school in June. Drive on to cut this dropout ratio by re-structuring curriculum more on H.S.P.G. basis than along strictly "collegiate" lines.

P.T.A.s STARTING just starting to get the word on the frightening inadequacies of most sex ed programs in junior and senior high schools. "Family life" courses are slowly being accepted by parents. The curriculum deals with dating, going steady, homosexuality, masturbation, narcotics, alcohol, marriage readiness and sexual relationship.

HELEN HELP US!

by Helen Bottel

YOUTH ASKED FOR IT!
This column is for young people, their problems and pleasures, their troubles and fun. As with the rest of Helen Help US!, it welcomes laughs but won't dodge a serious question with a brush-off.
Send your teenage questions to YOUTH ASKED FOR IT, care of Helen Help US! this newspaper.

TOO YOUNG TO DROWN TROUBLES IN DRINK
Dear Helen: I am a boy of nearly 15. My friends and I have this problem of feeling guilty about something we don't really think is that wrong.
Every Friday night we pool our money and go drinking. We get the stuff from a certain source, and meet at any house where the parents happen to be out.
I know what you're thinking, but nothing happens. We neck a little but that's as far as it goes.
The youngest in the group is a 13-year-old girl, and the oldest is 17. But our minds are far more advanced than others' our ages.
The only bad thing I feel is, what if this leads to bigger things, like drugs and dope? Already some of the kids have tried pot. Are we being stupid to keep on with our drinking? We don't do anything terrible, and almost all teen-agers do it. We'd feel out of the teen set if we quit.
Don't tell us to discuss this with our parents or teachers. Most of us have a few things wrong with our homes, like too much liquor and fighting, or divorcees. And teachers would only turn us in.
Please try to understand.—
THE TROUBLED TEENS

Dear Teens: I understand all too well that urge to try the forbidden. When you drink, you're breaking the law; you're defying parents who bug you, you're big, brave, daring, "mature," envied—so YOU think!
But really, when you brag about "getting bombed," you only impress one "crowd": The kids who, like you, have so many problems they're afraid to take life straight.

"Almost all teens do it?" You're so wrong, friend. True, most have TRIED liquor by the time they're 17, but less than 15 percent (according to my informal survey) lush it up at mixed parties. Others are mature enough to think ahead, knowing "We don't do anything terrible" are famous last words.
Too bad you kids can't learn in reverse. When your messed-up family lives clearly show what the sauce can do, why aren't you smart enough to say, "I won't make the same mistakes!"—H.

Dear Helen: A couple of days ago some friends of mine—aged 13 to 16 went shopping with me and we stopped at a cafe for lunch. It was nearly 2:00 p.m. and the place wasn't crowded.
We waited and waited—over half an hour—while the three waitresses on duty chatted with each other and with the customers, who had already been served. Finally my boyfriend asked politely for service and one of the women snapped, "I'm busy. Wait your turn!"
So we got up and went to the manager, still being polite. He rudely told us to "Get Lost!"
Helen, it isn't only here, but lots of places treat us teens like dirt, just because we're teens. What can we do?—
TIRED OF IT

Dear Tired: You can fight back with the quietest and most potent weapon in the world: Take your business elsewhere! And spread the bad word among your friends.
Salespeople who are unreasonable to teens should be considered that young-agers spend some $5 billion dollars a year! Need I say more?—H.

On one occasion, a 10-foot shark was found in the stomach of a sperm whale, so we can safely assume the whale could swallow a human being.

BRIGHT LANDMARK. Gibbs Hill Light in Bermuda is said to be one of the most powerful navigational beacons in the world. Towering 362 feet above sea level, its half-million-candlepower light has been seen by jet pilots more than 200 miles away.

Fred Karpin points out in "Winning Play in Tournament and Rubber Bridge" that part of good deceptive play is to create an illusion for your adversaries.

Today's hand is from the 1948 Masters Individual championship and shows how South created an illusion which saved him from a hazardous guess.

South's two diamonds was a slight overbid and we don't approve at all of his four no-trump call. We just don't bid four no-trump with a worthless doubleton in our hand unless our partner has bid that suit. However, there was nothing wrong with the final contract.

The play started out automatically. South took dummy's ace of hearts and cashed his ace and king of trumps. Then he led his four top clubs and discarded dummy's three of hearts on the fourth club.

Then he paused for a moment before leading out his deuce of spades. This pause gave West a good chance to count the hand. South had shown four clubs and the diamond play indicated six diamonds, so South had started with 6-4-2-1 distribution.

Had it included two spades and one heart or two hearts and one spade? If it had included two hearts, it behooved West to take his ace of spades and save the overtrick. South would just be trying to sneak that spade through. Had it included two spades and one heart, South would be delighted to see the ace of spades appear and save the guess.

In rubber bridge West would duck quickly. He wouldn't mind the overtrick. But this was match point duplicate. Furthermore South had played the hand just as if he had started with two hearts. West went right up with his ace of spades and South had eliminated his spade guess.

(Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

Q—The bidding has been:
West North East South
1 ♠ 1 ♠ Dble Rdbld
2 ♣ 2 ♠ Pass ?
You, South, hold:
♠ A 8 7 6 ♡ A 10 5 3 2 ♦ 5 4 ♣ 3

What do you do?
A—Bid four spades. Your partner's two spade bid has shown a minimum type hand with a decent suit. You want to be in game but have no slam interest.

TODAY'S QUESTION
The bidding has gone the same way except that East raised his partner to three clubs before you bid four spades. Now East bids five clubs. What do you do?

YOUR DENTAL HEALTH

Paget's Disease of Jaw Is Slow, Progressive

By WILLIAM LAWRENCE, D.D.S.

DEAR DOCTOR: Can you please tell me what Paget's disease of the jaw is? What are the symptoms and what is the cure?

ANSWER: Paget's disease is not specifically a disease of the jaw but rather of the entire body skeleton. When the jaws are involved, upper jaws are more often affected than lower, in women more than men, and in middle life or later.

Gay Blade 'Dull' on Weekends

By IRA BERKOW

NEW YORK—(NEA)—One of baseball's most eligible bachelors spends too many of his weekend nights watching television in his hotel room.

Earl Wilson, Detroit's star right-handed pitcher, often lives the kind of life his name-sake, a syndicated gossip columnist, writes about. Lately, however, Wilson's excursions to pleasure palaces in American League cities have been cut considerably by manager Mayo Smith.

In a hotel room, Wilson, 32, discussed his bachelor problems. The 6-3, 215-pounder primping before going to the ball park. In a maroon undershirt that emphasized his powerful arms and tight, light gray suit pants that outlined his slim waist and wearing black alligator loafers, Wilson combed his hair before a mirror. On a night table was Esquire's "Good Grooming Guide."

"I know Mayo doesn't do it intentionally," said Wilson, smiling, "but it seems I've been pitching a lot of weekends. I've got to stay in top condition and I can't be hitting spots before I pitch. So I stay in my room and watch TV. I have to. Imagine what he'd say if I showed up at the park with red-rimmed eyes bulging out. I usually go out after I pitch."

But isn't he tired from the game? "Sure," he replied. "But not too tired to date. I get renewed energy." Wilson slipped on a white silk shirt and inserted golf cufflinks.

"My life as a single guy has been overrated, though," he said. "First of all, there aren't too many swinging towns. Chicago, New York and Los Angeles are good. But personally, I just don't move too well in Chicago and New York. They're both too big and I don't know many people in either city. So I go to night clubs—that's my favorite form of entertainment—then tuck in early. I'm almost always in bed by 11 p.m."

"Now Los Angeles is a great town. But I have relatives in San Diego. So that's where I spend most of my time when we play the Angels."

"For me, Boston is the best town in the country. I played there several years and know a lot of people. It's important for a bachelor to have friends. You can be yourself. If you're not in a good mood and say something out of the way, they'll understand. Say the same thing with strangers and they'll think you're arrogant."

Wilson carefully knotted an iridescent gray-yellow tie and stuck in an auburn ear pin. "Cleveland's the worst town in the league," he said. "I often find myself with Mondays and Tuesdays off there. I just can't do a thing. I wouldn't have any better luck if I had a week off there."

"Washington and Baltimore are also deadly. Washington is supposed to have millions of single girls. But I haven't seen many. Baltimore? It's like Washington, but with the reputation."

"Detroit is poor, too." Then, reflectively, he reassessed. "No. I'll say it's average."

Wilson looks forward to Oakland. "It's so close to San Francisco," he said, delightedly. "And I don't have to tell you what San Francisco means to a single guy. If it's even a little like Minneapolis, I'll be in great shape. Oh, the women in Minneapolis. Wonderful, simply wonderful."

He pulled on his light gray suit jacket. "The suit is custom-made, costs about $225 retail." He had painted a fairly gloomy picture of his social life. But, he was asked, doesn't being a celebrity have advantages?

"Celebrity?" he asked. "I never think of it that way. Movie stars and politicians are celebrities. Maybe some superstars. But I can hardly imagine someone who rolls in the dirt for a living to be a celebrity."

HOPE (ARK) STAR, Printed by Offset

HAYAAAAH!! The air is shattered by this scream and the loud crack of a whip. The sound of thundering hooves, mingled with wild cheers of the onlookers, testify that the race is on. These are the cutter races that are so popular in Wyoming, Montana and other western states. The driver stands in the cutter, bracing himself against the wind, urging his steeds to full speed ahead. The horses usually are the wildest, most skittish nags to be found. With two of these wild-eyed critters hitched to a cutter, anything can happen—and often does. The cutters themselves are homemade of steel barrels cut in half and mounted atop a pair of auto wheels. The rig resembles a Roman chariot and the Ben Hurs who drive them are worthy descendants of the men who won the West.

So, there I was. Opening day. Against my better judgment, I deliberately hiked a half-mile upstream through bramble thickets to get into a reasonably remote spot.

There was a lovely stretch of open water that tumbled down and suddenly leveled off in a smooth glide and, below that, a deep pool where the river bent 40 degrees to the left. The water was high and muddy from the unseasonable thaw during the previous week. Not really good water, but I'd fished worse.

I worked the stretch methodically, trying to read the turbid waters, and going through every wet pattern in my book, with a spectacular lack of success. It had to be the poor condition of the water. I mean, never has a man so artfully worked a streamer through riffle and glide. Poetry, that's what it was.

And then one of "them" came into view. One look, that's all you needed. Brand new hipboots. Clean vest. And a golf hat decorated with gaudy patterns that had never been any closer to the river than the guy's head. "Hi! How're you doing?" quoth he, stumbling on down to be sociable. I shrugged. "Jeez, I got one beauty," he said. He opened up the brand new creel and lifted out a gorgeous brown that would have gone at least two pounds. At least.

"Worms?" There was just the right edge in my tone. He looked sheepish. "Yeah," he said, avoiding my disdainful stare. "I got a couple more, too. I just love to catch fish." He finally looked up, with that innocent pleading in his eyes. "How many you got?"

"It's the felicity of the thing," I informed him. And headed back for the car. It was no place for purists. (Newspaper Enterprise Ass'n)

Chi Chi Learned Golf 'Fast'

Chi Chi Rodriguez
By TOMMY THOMAS
NEA Sports Writer

NEW YORK—(NEA)—Chi Chi Rodriguez, 120-pound golfing giant from Puerto Rico, says when he drinks tomato juice he resembles a thermometer. He enjoys poking fun at himself and his fellow athletes on the pro tour.

"I remember once in the Masters," he says, "Tommy Bolt hit his tee shot within a hundred yards of the green and asked his caddy to suggest a club for the next shot. 'Either a 4-wood or 2-iron,' the caddy replied. 'Whadda ya mean? I'm only a hundred yards from the green,' Bolt snapped. 'Yes, but those are the only two you've got left in the bag,' the caddy answered."

Rodriguez rescued himself and his family from poverty with a hot putter and a powerful drive that made him one of the longest hitters in the game, even though he stands only 5-7.

"I started playing when I was a kid in Puerto Rico," he recalls. "I would leave school early and go to the golf course. The club pro would usually close the shop about 45 minutes before dark, which is why I became such a fast player. I would sneak onto the course and play 18 holes in 45 minutes. That included a few 'gimmies,' of course."

climb to the top and his personable antics have made him a favorite with the galleries. He also gets along well with most of the pros.

"I've got plenty of good jokes for the crowd," he says. "When I make a putt or a good shot, I'm going to be happy and I'm going to show it. I want to give the gallery something for its money. Some of the pros used to complain about me. A couple years ago they didn't like me but I get along with everyone now. Maybe it's because I'm not scoring as well as I was then."

"And the young kids on the tour are just great. And they're smart. Some of them, when I first see them, I think maybe I'll take them aside, give them two strokes and beat them. Then I look at the newspaper and see they're beating me."

"This is not good because I spend a lot of money just on travel expenses. Because I only go one way... first class. But so does everyone else. I know a pro who couldn't find room on the plane recently. It was filled up with caddies. I remember when we had to hitchhike."

One of Chi Chi's more humorous experiences happened when he was playing in Mexico.

"I had hit into a sand trap," he said, "and missed the ball three times. Finally, on the fourth swing, I knocked it out of the trap and into the cup. One of the spectators said to a companion, 'Eef it took him that long just to get out of the beeg hole, just think how long it weel take him to get it out of the leetle one.'"

"A lady in the gallery asked me if I could speak Spanish. I said very little. Then I threeputtied the next two greens. I heard the lady say, 'Oooh! He CAN speak Spanish.'"

Part of Chi Chi's appeal is that fans can identify with him. One of them recently asked him about mental blocks and choking up.

"Yes, I admit sometimes that happens," he said. "In a recent tournament, I was faced with a long putt. I would have bet my home I would sink it and sure enough, I did. Then later, I had a very short putt but I really felt I would miss it. And I did."

"If you ever need a heart transplant," he told the guy, "don't get mine."

The latter is bad advice because, thanks to Chi Chi's big heart, his family is well-provided for and in the near future, he hopes to take some poor boys from his homeland and make good golfers of them.

"Maybe what has happened to me could happen to them," he says. "I would like to teach all the kids in Puerto Rico how not to be poor."

Always on Sunday

When golfers are knocked for not looking athletic, don't include Miller Barber (the Byron Nelson Classic winner), though he's the dullest swinger of all. Years ago, when Miller's put wasn't so big, he was a varsity single wing blocking back at Arkansas and made his letter on one of Bowden Wyatt's teams. He was 195 pounds then. And now?

Jimmy Ellis

"210 pounds of hammering hell," he grins. . . .

On the tour they call bachelor Barber "The Mysterious Mr. X." Because no one can ever find him once he leaves the course. . . .

It's the little things that stick with you. When Jimmy Ellis was a sparring partner for Cassius Clay, and sharpening up the deposed champ for his fight with Brian London in England, Jimmy would disappear on Sundays, when he didn't have to work in the ring. Turned out that one of the promoter's bunkies had a son, 12, who liked fighters and the water. Jimmy would pick him up every Sunday and hop a train to Brighton, the seaside spa, for an outing. . . .

Sal Bando of the Oakland Athletics doesn't want to knock Al Dark, who managed him as a rookie a year ago, when he batted .192. But he will admit, "Mr. Dark made me change a few things in my batting style. And the big leagues isn't the place to experiment." . . .

Heartwarming baseball tableau: 17 years ago a little high school catcher in Sacramento, Calif., signed a professional baseball contract—no bonus. He couldn't hit, and after wandering around the low minors for five years, he wound up back in his home town, then sporting a Triple-A team, as a second-string catcher, hitting .171. Deciding he had no future as a player, he turned to managing, at the age of 25, and traveled around the minors another decade. It was tough on a minor league salary raising a family of four kids. But along the way, he also got a chance to manage such choice young talent as Bando, Rick Monday and Reggie Jackson in the Oakland farm system. And this year, his 17th in organized baseball, John McNamara has finally made it to the big league—as a coach with the Athletics.

You think Jim Brown didn't know something when he quit pro football for the movies a couple of years ago? Last year, a cinema agent informs us, Jimmy raked in $600,000 for his movie-making. And they're still promoting him as the first big Negro sex symbol. . . .

It's been hell for Roberto de Vicenzo since the notoriety of The Big Gaud at the Masters. The emotional Argentinian has been bugged by the maudlin sympathy of strangers. He had a room foul-up at one tournament that forced him to bunk with Bruce Deylin, and the Aussie was roused at all hours to accept telegrams and phone calls. The president of Argentina sent De Vicenzo a wire, and the ambassador in Washington invited him to dinner. . . .

His reaction to the future: "I just want to go back and look at my parking lot." . . . He's an owner of a parking lot in the middle of Buenos Aires. . . .

Between you'n' me, Paul Christman's decision to switch from NBC to CBS and do the color for Chicago Bear telecasts will cost the erstwhile quarterback 10 grand a year. But nobody's holding benefits for Pichin Paul. In his real business, as a manufacturer's representative, he grosses a million a year. . . .

The best-kept secret of the Vietnamese war, an allied offensive against the Ashau valley Communist stronghold has been under way since mid-April. The valley, a major staging area and supply route 2,000 feet above sea level and bordered by mountain peaks, varies from 600 feet to five miles in width and runs 25 miles from the Laotian border to central Vietnam's coastal plain, within 15 miles of embattled Hue. U.S. commanders call the Communist-built road through the valley a "superhighway."

Rockefeller Getting Good Reception

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Pacing the aisle of a campaign bus in a sweat-soaked shirt, hitting it off well with the crowds—Nelson A. Rockefeller in his first full day of campaigning for the presidency seemed a man glad to be in the race at last.

After his announcement Wednesday that he was going after the Republican nomination, the New York governor hopped to Iowa Thursday for a day of campaigning.

It was, he said, "one of the most exhilarating days of my life."

Rockefeller was interrupted 16 times by applause in a speech before some 8,000 persons at the University of Iowa as he called for voting at age 18 and a lottery plan to pick draftees.

Later, on his way to a fund-raising dinner in Cedar Rapids—another friendly audience—he couldn't sit still in his campaign bus.

Shucking his coat, he kept propping the length of the bus, his shirt clammy with perspiration, as he spun off ideas and swapped thoughts with a group of students in the back.

Rockefeller planned to return to New York today but didn't disclose where he would appear next in pursuit of the vote.

Richard M. Nixon, who has a head start of months on Rockefeller in the quest for the GOP nomination, touched again Thursday on the "black capitalism" concept he recently introduced.

In a nationwide radio address from Indianapolis, Ind., the former vice president said tax incentives and loan guarantees could help many Negroes to become owners of their businesses and "remove the ceiling from black aspiration."

Nixon is the only Republican on the ballot in Indiana's primary next Tuesday. But the Democratic contest that day continues to grow in import.

Aides of Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy, D-Minn., say that if he wins 30 per cent of the vote in the three-man competition he will interpret this as a signal to press on in his fight for the presidential nomination.

During a wide-ranging day of campaigning Thursday in Indiana, McCarthy seemed to be saying—or at least suggesting—that he expects to trail Sen. Robert F. Kennedy in the primary.

The third Democrat in the race is Gov. Roger D. Branigin, a favorite son trying to keep Kennedy or McCarthy from getting their hands on the votes the Indiana delegation will take to the Democratic National Convention.

LBJ Hopeful Talks Will End the War

By FRANCES LEWINE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson says May 3, 1968 is "a day we shall remember"—the day a site for preliminary talks with North Vietnam was agreed upon.

The negotiating phase of the war will "exact the best from all of us," the President said Friday night.

"We often think about peace as an absence of war," Johnson said. "But in fact peace is a positive achievement, an achievement to convert hostilities, bloody violence, hate into reason."

Johnson announced the accord as a site for peace talks today, a day after a radio broadcast and telecast of his conference. He then spent a busy day that took him to Mexico and back again and turned up unannounced in the evening at dedication ceremonies of the Old Patent Office Building, refurbished for a new life as an art museum.

First peace-contact meetings are to be held next Friday.

"I have sought this moment for more days and nights than you will ever credit," the President told some 2,000 art patrons and government officials, "and in enough places for historians to judge that we were fully credible when we said 'anytime, anywhere.'"

Johnson's day included a flight to Independence, Mo., and a visit with former President Harry S. Truman to talk about peace prospects with his old political friend.

He also brought along cuff links, a picture and other gifts for an advance celebration of Truman's 84th birthday, which comes next Wednesday.

Back in Washington, the President, Mrs. Johnson, and their older daughter, Lynda, attended the museum's opening ceremonies.

Robertson said he thought Rockefeller's implication was "kind of funny." He also said he had always voted Republican on the national level.

"I voted for Rockefeller the last two times he ran and I won't criticize him or his administration because I am proud of the work he has done for the two-party system," Robertson said.

Jim Perkins, president of the Muskogee, Okla., firm that employed Robertson, announced Thursday that Robertson had been fired as sales representative because he filed for the gubernatorial nomination.

Robertson filed Wednesday. "They seemed happy with everything when I talked to them this (Thursday) morning," Robertson said.

Robertson was asked if a sizeable number of Democrats might cross party lines and vote for him in the primary.

"I think I'll get a lot of support in the primary," Robertson said.

"There's always that possibility," Rockefeller said in response to a similar question. "It could have happened easily in 1966 (when he was opposed by Gus McMillan), but it did not."

"It could happen in 1968, but I'm not so apprehensive about it," he said. He added that he was delighted to have Robertson in the Republican ranks if he were "honestly Republican."

Rockefeller also said he was familiar with Mrs. Virginia Johnson, one of the Democratic gubernatorial candidates.

"I know Mrs. Johnson can campaign," he said. "I campaigned more against her (in 1966) than I campaigned against the love boy (her husband Jim)."

Rockefeller said he could not be sure his brother, New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller, would carry the Arkansas delegation to the Republican national convention, but added, "It would be nice to have a family relationship with the White House."

Rockefeller said he was disappointed that there were not more Republicans running for state office. He added, however, that he was "very satisfied" with the slate of GOP candidates who have filed for this year's state elections.

Hope's First Radio Station Went on the Air 21 Years Ago

By MARY ANITA LASETER
Star Feature Writer
KXAR is "of age" this year of 1968. Yes, radio station KXAR is 21, as its first broadcast was heard in 1947.

To celebrate the occasion the management and staff will hold a reception at the Town and Country Sunday, May 5 from 3 to 5 p.m. This will also kick off the observance of National Radio Month and will introduce four personalities from the Arkansas Radio Network to the public. They are Don Corbett, Bob Bulce, John Reeder, and Network Manager Tom Longfellow. There will be gifts for the first 200 women attending, and refreshments will be served to everyone.

During Radio Month—May—the slogan, "Radio, the All-American Sound," is being stressed. With 270 million working radios in the United States today, 98 per cent of the residences in Hempstead County equipped with them, and 63 per cent of all cars boasting a radio, it is quickly seen why the slogan is certainly true.

Using a staff of 13, KXAR gives news, entertainment and services beneficial to people throughout Southwest Arkansas. The current Senior Salutes now being heard on KXAR are the result of an idea originated by station manager Haskell Jones and recorded by the Pepper Library to be used by stations in many parts of the country.

KXAR has an annual payroll ranging from $32,000 to $35,000, and 90 per cent of the larger businesses in Hope advertise on the local radio station. The advertiser which has the longest continuous association with the station is Hamm Tire and Appliance, which has sponsored the noon news since KXAR was opened in 1947.

From the point of service, Norman Bradford, chief engineer, has been with KXAR longer than anyone else—almost 20 years. Manager Haskell Jones has been with the station a little more than 13 years and has held the managerial position since February of 1960.

Other staff members are broadcasters Verlaene Jones, Mary Anita Laster, the Rev. S. Joseph Geno, Randy Johnson, Ralph Routon, Ronnie Gibson, Mark Gunter, and Dan Stuart. In the office are Mrs. Gus Hickerson and Mrs. A. C. Shynard, and the advertising manager is R. M. Jones.

KXAR programs its broadcasts primarily to adults and features standard music all day in a wide variety from "country and western" to "gospel" to tunes from Hollywood and Broadway. In a poll taken in the area, it was learned that the average housewife here listens to the radio 25 hours a week.

This is only one reason why radio is the all-American sound and why KXAR is the Voice of Southwest Arkansas. Many others are the result of up-to-the-minute news of local, state, and national interest heard on KXAR at scheduled times and in bulletin form.

People in our locale know that if they wonder about approaching bad weather, or whether school schedules will be changed, or the time and location of club and civic meetings, they have only to tune their radio to KXAR, 1490 on the radio dial.

Remember, KXAR is having a party at the Town and Country Sunday, May 5 from 3 to 5 p.m. and you are invited.

McLEAN, Va. (AP) — "I regret to say," said Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, "that one of my sons in the company of another boy got into trouble last Saturday while my wife and I were away from home."

The Democratic presidential contender issued a statement while campaigning in Indiana Thursday after police in this Washington suburb disclosed his 12-year-old son, David, was apprehended last week after a rock-throwing incident on a highway near the Kennedys' Hickory Hill home.

David, one of 10 Kennedy children, and the other boy were brought to a police station after a motorist complained they threw rocks at his car, said Police Chief William L. Durrer of Fairfax County.

No charges were brought against the boys and they were taken home—David by a governess and the other boy by his parents, Durrer said.

"We will follow the same procedures we use in all such incidents involving young children without prior records and hope the parents of the boys will be able to work things out," the chief added.

Police said the complaint, brought by Leoneo L. Correa of McLean, was dropped on condition the boys' parents pay the $119.72 damage. The windshield of Correa's car was smashed.

Sen. Kennedy said of his son: "He feels very badly about what he has done and has apologized to all concerned. He is a good boy who has always been a source of joy and pride to all our family and never has been involved in any trouble whatsoever prior to this incident."

He and Mrs. Kennedy will of course appear at the appropriate time and place to meet the requirements of the law.

Planes Falls in Texas, 84 Killed

By CLAYTON HICKERSON
Associated Press Writer
DAWSON, Tex. (AP) — Eighty-four persons died in a Braniff International Electra that exploded and plunged to earth in blazing pieces Friday as the crew bucked thunderstorms laced with lightning.

Chunks of wreckage and bits of bodies fell over the old Lonnie Wells farm—uninhabited and grown over by grass and brush—two miles east of this little central Texas town.

The high school gymnasium became a morgue as Dawson's 700 townspeople, engulfed by tragedy and joined by citizens of neighboring cities, turned to the task of finding and bringing in the bodies.

There were no survivors. A special FBI team was flown in to help identify the bodies. The National Guard was summoned to control traffic and sightseers.

The brightly painted, four-engine turboprop airliner, Flight 352, decorated in Braniff's Aztec Mexican motif, rolled to its takeoff from Houston at 4:11 p.m.—11 minutes behind schedule.

Following form, about that time one of the stewardesses—Jo Carol Brand of Taylor, N.D., and Suzanne Renz of South Orange, N.J.—would have been announcing to the passengers that Braniff would give each of them a voucher for $1.15 if the flight was more than 15 minutes behind the scheduled arrival time of 4:58 p.m. when they departed in Dallas.

Three minutes after takeoff, at 4:14 p.m., one of the flight deck crew—Capt. J.R. Phillips, First Officer John W. Foster and Second Officer D.W. Crossland—estimated in a radio report that the flight's estimated arrival time was 5:03 p.m., only five minutes behind schedule.

That was the last word as the Electra headed into the turbulence between Houston and Dallas. Flight controllers said they had no further conversation with the plane. The first indication of trouble to them came when the controller at Fort Worth's Great Southwest International Airport said at 4:51 p.m. that Flight 352 had vanished from his radar scope.

When the flight vanished from radar view, it flashed into the view of people in and near Dawson.

Dean Montgomery of Corsicana, a private pilot and operator of an electrical shop, said he saw a large explosion rip the plane. Then, he said, there were two smaller explosions, and the craft plummeted downward in two burning sections.

Jerry Merrill, a Dawson High School mathematics teacher, saw a flash in the sky.

"I looked up and there were flames all over the plane and it went down," he said. He couldn't be sure whether the flash he saw was lightning or sudden fire engulfing the plane.

If Flight 352 had reached Dallas, it would have flown on toward Tulsa, Fort Smith, Ark., Little Rock and Memphis.

There were 79 passengers in addition to the five crew members. All of the crew members were based in Dallas.

The scene of the crash is about 90 miles south of Dallas.

Bids Taken on Rail Bridge Work

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The Mary Construction Co. of Cape Girardeau, Mo., has submitted the apparent low bid of $2,424,596 for alteration of the St. Louis - San Francisco Railway Co. bridge over the Arkansas River at Van Buren.

The railroad will award the contract after the Army Engineers review bids on the overhauling necessitated by the Arkansas River Navigation project. The Railroad will be reimbursed by the federal government.

LBJ Invited

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson was invited Wednesday by the Arkansas Basin Association to attend ceremonies next fall marking the opening of navigation on the Arkansas River.

Do It, But Not At 47 Papers Per . . .

An Oklahoma congressman has called on the Budget Bureau to see what it can do about a new set of federal figures he has stumbled upon.

To his shock and horror, Congressman Tom Steed has discovered that 47 separate pieces of paper are required in connection with the addition of every new employee to the federal payroll. And almost equal number must be handled every time an employee is subtracted by one means or another.

Even in a nation that has commandeered a hollow mountain for storage of its records, the implications of this annual exercise in paper shuffling are staggering. The federal establishment takes on some 600,000 new employees each year. It subtracts hundreds of thousands of others.

So in the name of bureaucratic order something on the order of 90 million pieces of paper are handled, stamped, filled out, perused, piled, carried, filed, etc., just to order the comings and goings of new and departing federal personnel.

Steed's horror and his plea that the Budget Bureau do something are natural reactions. But so is the hope that the bureau won't do anything if it first has to take on new employees at 47 pieces of paper per . . . Charlotte (N.C.) Observer

The Silent Vote

The youth vote will be important in this year's national elections, but not so important as all the noise about it would indicate.

The 21-29 age group for all its loud, boisterous and excited campaign conduct, still musters only about 22 per cent of the total potential vote—down two per cent from the 1940s. Despite its numerical increase, the under 30 group still is outnumbered by the senior voters, those past age 60.

This is not to say that the young vote should fold its political tent and silently steal away. The nation needs its younger voters, even if they are brash. It also needs its middle-age vote and its elderly vote.

The older vote still has to be heard from, and probably won't be until it is time to count the ballots. At that time probably the great, older, silent vote will make itself heard above the hubbub of this noisy campaign year. - Greenville (S.C.) News

Death Risk Is Less in Rural Areas

WASHINGTON (AP) — The place a man calls home can often mean the difference between life and death after he has reached middle age, a new federal study reports.

For the white man 45 to 64, it says, the death risk is twice as great if he lives in an Eastern city instead of a rural area of the central or western United States.

The highest-risk states it listed as Hawaii, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Nevada, northern Arizona, parts of Louisiana, southern Mississippi and east-central Pennsylvania.

States with the lowest risk: North Dakota, Nebraska, Minnesota, Kansas, New Mexico, Oregon, Colorado, Texas, Iowa and Missouri.

The findings were in a report released Thursday by the U.S. Public Health Service.

It said that in general, urban and other heavily populated areas have higher risk rates for middle-aged men than rural areas.

The reasons for these differences are not known, said Herbert L. Sour, a statistician for the National Center for Chronic Disease Control.

He said health experts are considering as possible causes such "risk factors" associated with heart disease as cigarette smoking, overweight, diet and the stresses and strains of life in various regions.

The heavily populated area between Boston and Washington, D.C., has a death-risk rate generally in middle to upper levels. The West Coast, other than Oregon, is mostly in the middle-risk rate range, the study said.

Israeli Holds Celebration, Kills 12 Arabs

By MARCUS ELLISON
Associated Press Writer
TEL AVIV (AP) — Israeli troops patrolling the Negev Desert while most of their countrymen celebrated the 20th anniversary of their independence killed 12 Arab saboteurs in a clash Thursday night, the army announced.

This raised the total number of Arab infiltrators reported killed this week to 30 and made it the most successful week in the army's anti-guerrilla campaign since the Arab-Israeli war last June.

The army said about 125 guerrillas have been killed since last September, when Arab commando activities accelerated.

Two Israelis were wounded, one seriously, in the fight Thursday night near the settlement of Neot Hakikar, on the border with Jordan. An army spokesman said mines, Soviet machine guns, hand grenades and explosives were found near the bodies of the saboteurs.

Earlier this week, the army said a patrol killed 13 infiltrators Sunday night near Jericho, in the West Bank territory seized from Jordan in the war last June.

Military sources said they believe the sudden growth in size of guerrilla bands—previously they rarely exceeded five men—is due to the saboteurs' belief that they can break through Israeli patrols and ambushes if they have greater firepower.

Israel had defied the U.N. Security Council and its Arab neighbors Thursday by parading its military might and trophies of last year's war through an Arab sector of Jerusalem in the highlight of the independence celebration.

The feckety Council had called on the Israelis to cancel the parade, contending it would harm chances of a peace agreement with the Arabs.

Youth's Death Offers Hope to 4 Persons

LOMA LINDA, Calif. (AP) — The parents of Daniel Sochor, dead at 11, have offered new hope to four persons. They have given his skin to one, his spleen to another and his kidneys to two others.

Daniel, described as "a lively little boy" by his father, Stanley Sochor, died after a traffic accident Thursday as he returned from a Little League baseball game.

His father and mother, deeply religious Seventh-day Adventists, readily agreed to suggestions by doctors at Loma Linda University Hospital that their son's vitality benefit the living.

The boy's kidneys were sped to the University of California at Los Angeles Medical Center and transplanted to Chester S. Garbacz, 42, of Claremont, Calif., and Herman Holloway, 34, of Los Angeles.

About the same time much of his skin was grafted onto Mrs. Brandon McLane of Loma Linda, who had suffered third-degree burns in a March 28 fire that killed her young son. The new skin covered 40 per cent of her body.

Meanwhile a few miles south, a part of Daniel's spleen was being used to treat "a serious blood disease" in an unidentified patient at Orange County General Hospital.

Hospital spokesmen reported both kidney recipients were in good condition while the burn patient remained critical. There was no report on the spleen case.

Scientists Say Proteins May Involve Brain

By BRIAN SULLIVAN
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Brain research scientists report that they have found, for the first time, specific proteins in the brain involved "in some intimate way" in learning and memory.

With this knowledge, one scientist said, it may become possible to "influence the proteins and, at crucial periods of development, increase the potential for learning."

Dr. Samuel Bogoch, director of the Foundation for Research on the Nervous System, of Boston, reported isolating acidic protein that increased during learning in pigeons.

"It is very likely that the same thing exists in man's brain," Dr. Bogoch said. "It would be most unusual if it is not so."

The work by Bogoch was confirmed by work done by Dr. Holgar Hyden, director of the Institute of Neurobiology at the University of Goteborg, Sweden.

Both men reported their studies to an international conference on "The Future of the Brain Sciences" sponsored by the Boston foundation and the Manfred Sakel Institute of New York, meeting today.

Dr. Hyden suggested another way of influencing the function of the brain—injecting nucleic acids.

It might be possible, he said Thursday, to counteract the aging process in the brain by injecting fresh genetic material.

$44,350 Loan to Garfield

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — A $44,350 loan to the town of Garfield (Benton County) has been approved to aid the city with construction of a water system.

Farmers Home Administration state Director Herman H. Hankins announced approval of the loan Thursday.
